ORANGE COUNTY MENTAL HEALTH EVENTS CALENDAR

MAY 2021

StigmaFreeOC

A Brief History of May as Mental Health Awareness Month

In 1949, the U.S. Congress designated May as National Mental Health Awareness Month to spotlight mental health. It was four years after the end of World War II. The immediate catalyst was the large numbers of armed forces veterans who were suffering from mental health challenges.

But the history of modern mental health advocacy dates back to 1908 and the publication of a memoir by Clifford Beers, “A Mind That Found Itself.” Beers was a recent Yale College graduate, working on Wall Street, when he experienced his first bipolar episode. After a failed suicide attempt, he was hospitalized for three years in public and private hospitals. Beers himself was restrained in a straitjacket for twenty-one nights, and he witnessed horrible treatment and abuse of others who were suffering from mental illness. His experiences led him to become a powerful advocate for better and more compassionate mental health care, as well as to change established beliefs and to prove that people suffering from mental illness could live full, productive lives. When Beers published his book, he hoped it would have the same national impact for removing the stigma around mental illness as Harriet Beecher Stowe’s landmark work, “Uncle Tom’s Cabin” had for the abolition movement.

In 1910, joining with philosopher William James and psychiatrist Adolf Meyer, Beers established the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, which today is known as Mental Health America. One of the committee’s first steps was to create child guidance clinics, aimed at prevention, early intervention and treatment. These clinics would ultimately become the model for outpatient mental health care for all age groups around the U.S. and were the first to pioneer an inter-disciplinary model of treatment for mental health disorders.

Although Beers passed away in 1943, advocacy for mental health expanded. In 1947, Congress’ National Mental Health Act created the National Institute on Mental Health. Mental Health Awareness Month followed in 1949. But it still took decades to achieve greater change. Not until 1966 did Medicare begin to cover mental health costs, and only in 1974 did the federal government stop requiring job applicants to answer the question: “Have you ever been mentally ill?” It took until 2010 for mental health to be designated as an Essential Health Benefit as part of the Affordable Care Act.

Today, we know that mental health issues affect as many as one in four Americans. More people in the United States die from suicide than from traffic accidents or homicides, and twenty-two veterans take their lives each day. At the federal level, Health and Human Services and its SAMHSA (Substance Abuse and Mental Health Services Administration) division oversee National Mental Health Awareness Month, along with multiple private partners. As Representative Grace Napolitano (CA) said in 2020 to mark National Mental Health Awareness Month, this is a time “when we work together to break through that stigma. We express compassion for those who struggle with mental health issues, and we draw attention to the proven methods that can help change their lives for the better.”

"When asked 'Did you seriously consider attempting suicide during the past 12 months?'

45.8% of LGB youth reported that they had seriously considered attempting suicide versus 13.5% of their non-LGB peers.

Similar results were found for transgender youth, with 49.2% admitting to having seriously considered suicide versus 15.2% of non-transgender youth.

When translated into real numbers, this indicates that in one year in Orange County approximately 7,065 middle school and high school LGBT youth seriously considered attempting suicide."

Join us for healing, hope and insight as we advance awareness on one of the largest public health crisis in our country. As the highly acclaimed documentary Resilience - The Biology of Stress and the Science of Hope reveals, there is a dangerous biological syndrome caused by abuse and neglect during childhood. Toxic stress impacts the brain development of children and can be predictive of a lifetime of physical and mental illness. What's more, the physiological changes brought on by toxic stress also put children at greater risk for homelessness, prison time and early death. But this does not have to be the case. Resilience chronicles the work of trailblazers who are addressing toxic stress and other Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs), such as abuse, neglect and violence with nearly every research-recommended strategy and, thereby providing insight, hope, and strategies on how each one of us can make a difference.

THE S WORD skillfully weaves stories of survivors from a cross-section of America including LGBT, African American and Asian American communities, who candidly share their profoundly emotional stories of trauma, mental health challenges, survival and advocacy. The film’s narrative flows organically from one story to the next, starting with personal moments and building emotional momentum before widening out to show how their journeys are driving the national movement to take the “S” word from unthinkable to preventable. Tips and best practices on how to talk to someone about suicide will be shared during the discussion after the film screening.

Suicide By The Numbers

- Suicide is the tenth leading cause of death in the US, accounting for more than 1% of all deaths. It is the second leading cause of death among people ages 15-24.
- More years of life are lost to suicide than to any other single cause except heart disease and cancer
- 44,000 Americans die by suicide each year. There are 13.8 deaths by suicide per 100,000 persons each year.
- There is one death by suicide for every 25 attempts
- 40% of persons who complete suicide have made a previous attempt. Nine of out ten people who attempt suicide and survive, do not go on to complete suicide at a later date.
- Previous suicide attempts serve as a risk factor for completed suicide. Suicide risk is 37% higher in the first year after deliberate self-harm than in the general population. Older white adults have triple the suicide risk than younger, non-white adults.
- Suicide rates are highest among adults between 45 and 64 at 19.6 per 100,000. The second highest rate is 19.4 per 100,000 among those 85 years or older. Compared with middle-aged older adults, younger populations have consistently lower suicide rates. While males are four times more likely to do die by suicide, females are three times more likely to attempt suicide.
- Those with substance abuse disorders are six times more likely to complete suicide than those without. The rate of completed suicide among men with alcohol/drug abuse problems is 2-3 times higher than among those without a problem. Women who abuse substances are at 6-9 times higher risk of suicide compared to women who do not have a problem.

This workshop introduces the benefits of practicing gratitude, how gratitude can change your perspective, and includes an activity where we create something to give to someone else to show gratitude. This presentation is also geared toward breaking the stigma associated with Mental Health. What is it? What influences it? How can we recognize the signs of mental illnesses and what can we do to cope with them?

"I was with someone recently who asked: 'Well, don't you think that if you do too much therapy it will take away your artistic process?' And I told them: The biggest lie that we've ever been sold is that we as artists have to stay in pain to create."

The COVID-19 pandemic has had a significant impact on mental health and wellness. Children have had many worries related to the impact of COVID-19. Some of these worries include not seeing their friends and family, going back to school, or getting sick. Parents are also facing challenges and worries related to their child’s physical and mental well-being.

The Community Networking Project is hosting a webinar for parents. The focus of this webinar is to offer a forum for parents to discuss and share information about the impact of COVID-19, offer resources to other parents and encourage each other to seek support when needed. During this interactive session with the parent panel, we will discuss:

- Impact of COVID-19 and impact on parent mental health
- Resources for parents to address their child’s mental health

140 LBS – How Beauty Killed my Mother – One Woman Solo Show
TIME: Streaming through weekend

WHERE: Laguna Playhouse Facebook live
<https://www.facebook.com/thelagunaplayhouse>

“140 LBS: How Beauty Killed My Mother” is a theatrical solo performance written and performed by Susan Lieu, a first-generation American born to Vietnamese refugees. “140 LBS” is the true story of how Susan’s mother went in for plastic surgery and died due to medical malpractice. At the time of her mother’s death, Susan was 11 years old. The performance weaves together several through-lines: the multi-generational immigrant experience; body insecurity and shame; repression and subsequent examination of personal loss; and lack of accountability in the medical system. Sifting through thousands of deposition pages and reaching out to the killer's family, Susan uncovers the painful truth of her mother, herself, and the impossible ideal of Vietnamese feminine beauty.

A family day out will be hosted in collaboration with NAMI OC and the Priority Center. Following COVID-19 safety guidelines, attendees will complete a small walk. Throughout the walk, families will be able to enjoy performances, magicians, balloon artist, petting zoo, photo booth, and be able to collect community resources information, and pick up materials to complete activities at home. At the end of the walk-through families will see a memorial piece commemorating the lives lost to COVID-19 in Orange County. Participants will have an option to submit loved one's names prior to the event for their names to be added to the memorial.

According to the Kaiser Permanente Orange County Mental Health Convening Summary Report (November 2017), Orange County has experienced over a 10% increase in suicide rates from 1999-2001 to 2011-13, which is the largest among major U.S. counties and exceeds national and state averages, as well as other cities' averages nationwide. There has been a 45% increase in suicide rates in the past decade.

Creating Affirming Spaces for Trans and Queer Youth is a comprehensive training about better meeting the needs of youth in the queer and trans community. As queer and trans youth are over-represented in systems of care, all service providers should be mindful of their unique experiences in these systems. The training will provide an introduction to Sexual Orientation, Gender Identity and Expression (SOGIE) terminology, the systemic oppression that members of these identities experience currently and historically, and an opportunity to discuss and practice ways that service providers can support queer and trans youth more effectively.

Join us for healing, hope and insight as we advance awareness on one of the largest public health crisis in our country. As the highly acclaimed documentary Resilience- The Biology of Stress and the Science of Hope reveals, there is a dangerous biological syndrome caused by abuse and neglect during childhood. Toxic stress impacts the brain development of children and can be predictive of a lifetime of physical and mental illness. What's more, the physiological changes brought on by toxic stress also put children at greater risk for homelessness, prison time and early death. But this does not have to be the case. Resilience chronicles the work of trailblazers who are addressing toxic stress and other Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACEs), such as abuse, neglect and violence with nearly every research-recommended strategy and, thereby providing insight, hope, and strategies on how each one of us can make a difference.

Workshop focused for men to learn strategies to heal and improve mental health. Virtual presentation.

“Sadly, too often, the stigma around mental health prevents people who need help from seeking it. But that simply doesn’t make any sense. Whether an illness affects your heart, your arm or your brain, it’s still an illness, and there shouldn’t be any distinction. We would never tell someone with a broken leg that they should stop wallowing and get it together... We shouldn’t treat mental health conditions any differently. Instead, we should make it clear that getting help isn’t a sign of weakness—it’s a sign of strength—and we should ensure that people can get the treatment they need.”

SFP's Empower Change- A Mental Health Approach to Teen Violence Prevention

TIME: 5 p.m.

WHERE: Zoom

<https://us02web.zoom.us/j/9306616512>

Bullying or teen violence is common problem that our children must deal on a daily basis. As our children transition from distance learning to in person instruction so does the bullying and violence. According to the CDC, homicide is the 3rd leading cause of death among teens. Teen violence often starts at home and parent's/caregivers have the power to make changes and support children with this issue.

In this workshop parents will learn the different types of bullying and some of the symptoms that teens show when they are victims or perpetrators of teen violence. Parent's will learn different ways to communicate with their children and support them through this process. Lastly parent's will learn strategies to strengthen their family unity and increase communication with their children to prevent future violence.

“The brain is a body part too; we just know less about it,” the former president said during a national conference on mental health in 2013.

“And there should be no shame in discussing or seeking help for treatable illnesses that affect too many people that we love. We've got to get rid of that embarrassment; we've got to get rid of that stigma. Too many Americans who struggle with mental health illnesses are still suffering in silence rather than seeking help, and we need to see it that men and women who would never hesitate to go see a doctor if they had a broken arm or came down with the flu, that they have that same attitude when it comes to their mental health.”

Sometimes the people around you won't understand your journey.

They don't need to, it's not for them.

Mental illness matters.
Talking about it matters.
Warning signs matter.
Addressing your ghosts matters.

YOU matter. And you are precious
