A Message from the OCSBA President – Sharon Wallin

As we begin this new school year, our classes are larger, our talented teachers are fewer in number, and our anxiety about California’s fiscal crisis continues to loom. We also start this new school year with great enthusiasm, hope and commitment. We are passionate when we see those young faces walk into school the first day, eager to learn. We are hopeful that each student will reach his or her potential. We are committed to the belief that education is a fundamental human right and essential for a brighter future.

There is no more important time to come together as an educational community with common purpose and resolve. Our students are depending on our leadership now more than ever. In the face of many challenges, we hope the programs provided by the Orange County School Boards Association will enable us to learn more, share more and strengthen our commitment. I encourage each of you to attend our dinner meetings. With the generous sponsorship of SchoolsFirst Federal Credit Union, OCSBA has reduced the dinner price and we will strive to provide speakers that will enlighten you. Our next dinner meeting will be on October 14 at the Irvine Marriott at 5:30 pm. Jennifer Kuhn, Director of K-12 Education at the California Legislative Analyst’s Office, will be our speaker.

I look forward to meeting each of you and welcome your input and suggestions. Let’s work together so that Orange County will continue to be a shining example of public education at its best.

Sharon Wallin

The U.S. Constitution requires the federal government to count every person living in the United States every ten years. The numbers are then used to help distribute federal resources and decide how many representatives each state will have in Congress. Participation is required by law and the information provided to the Census Bureau is confidential, and will not be shared with law enforcement, immigration, or any other government entity.

Every year, more than $400 billion in federal funds is awarded to states and communities based on results of the Census count. That is more than $4 trillion over a ten year period. In regards to educational funding, school districts receive Title I funds based on Census data. For the 2009-10 fiscal year, Orange County school districts received approximately $76 million in Title I funds and $47 million in American Recovery and Reinvestment Act (ARRA) federal stimulus funds based on previous Census data.

One of the ways the U.S. Census is planning on reaching residents is through our students. The U.S. Census Bureau recently sent out information to local school districts that included sample lesson plans and United States maps showing which states have the largest populations. Their goal is to increase awareness about the upcoming count, and to ensure school districts encourage students to be trusted messengers by reminding their parents or guardians to complete and mail their census forms.

In March, 2010, Census questionnaires will be sent out to households throughout the U.S. Please help ensure an accurate and fair count of the population by participating in the Census and by encouraging others to participate. The Census is not only a requirement, but a means to ensure you are counted so that local decision-makers can accurately decide community planning efforts. Participating in the Census is a right and a responsibility.

“Back to School… Are We Still Solvent?”
Presented by Ron Bennett, President/COE School Services of California
on September 16, 2009
Presentation highlights provided by Suzie Swartz, OCSBA Newsletter Editor

At the OCSBA special meeting held at the Orange County Department of Education on September 16, Ron Bennett, President/COE School Services of California presented a workshop on the State Budget and Economy with an emphasis on:

- Proposition 98
- The Education Budget
- What School Boards Should Be Doing

California’s budget deficit is among the worst of the 50 states, and it may take longer for our state’s economy to turn around. As California continues to cut education more than the other low-ranked states, we will continue to fall further below the national average and may well become last in education spending.

It will be difficult for school districts to plan for the future. It took only 18 months to go from a positive increase in the Revenue Limit to a negative 14.7% Revenue Limit deficit. (On average, districts should have received $6411 per ADA but this year will only get $4984 – a devastating deficit of $1427 per ADA).

Questions remain: How and when will the state ever pay back the $11 billion owed to our schools as under Prop. 98? Answer: There’s no telling.

What should school boards and administrators do? Relationships are critical. Setting priorities will be very difficult. Staffing and position control are key – 90% of the expenditures are for staff (salaries and benefits) and 90% of the cuts will be staff related.

The focus must be on sensitive, effective communications with teachers and staff and families, to promote a better understanding of the tougher times ahead. It is not possible for 2010-11 to be “a good year.” Unemployment isn’t expected to go down in California until 2011, and after that, it will take another 24 months for the tax revenue to catch up.

Effects of the California High School Exit Exam on Student Persistence, Achievement, and Graduation

A new Policy Analysis for California Education (PACE) policy brief summarizes the findings from a study investigating the impact of the California High School Exit Exam (CAHSEE) on California’s lowest performing students. Utilizing longitudinal data from four large urban school districts, Sean Reardon from Stanford and Michal Kurlaender from UC-Davis compared students who graduated just before (2005) and after (2006-07) when the exit exam became a requirement for graduation from California high schools.

They found that the CAHSEE requirement had no positive effects on students’ academic skills, and a large negative impact on graduation rates that fell disproportionally on minority students and on female students. The authors conclude that policymakers should reevaluate the utility of the high school exit exam in California’s accountability system.
